

Brittany Martin

American Sign Language - Interpreter

"Everything is falling together perfectly, even though it looks as if some things are falling apart. Trust in the process you are now experiencing."

-Neale Donald Walsch

Brittany Martin graduated high school in 2013 with the dream of becoming a nurse. During her first two years of college, she realized nursing wasn't for her and after taking a semester off, she changed majors. Recalling her foreign language classes from high school, she decided to pursue American Sign Language interpreting.

Brittany is grateful for all the love, support, and encouragement she received from her classmates, friends, professors, advisors, and family. Without them, she wouldn't be where she is today. She is proud of the accomplishments and memories she made during her time in the program.
